Process of Medical Certificate Attestation in Qatar

Medical Certificate attestation in Qatar requires regional, national and international levels of attestation. The initial level attestation is performed by notaries which is further followed by state level attestation, which again proceeded by MEA and Embassy attestation and concludes with MOFA attestation.

- Notary attestation

The preliminary step in the attestation process is performed by local notaries. Notaries are legal authorities entitled to perform the verification of documents. Notaries verify the identity of the signers, ensure the documents' authenticity and attest to it with stamps and signatures.

- State Government attestation

This is the second step of the attestation procedure. Here the authentication is carried out at the state level by the State Home Department (SHD), Human Resource Department (HRD), and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate (SDM).

- MEA Attestation

Following the regional and state level attestation, the Ministry of External Affairs performs attestation. MEA attestation is the last step of authentication from the home government. MEA is the authority to deal with the foreign affairs of the country and has a significant role to play in the attestation process. MEA meticulously checks the document and affixes a stamp to establish its authenticity.

- Embassy Attestation

After MEA attestation the embassy of the destination country authenticates the legality of the document to ensure it is acceptable for official purposes. For most countries, the attestation ends with this step.

- MOFA Attestation

In addition to Qatar, in countries like Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and UAE, it is MOFA or The Ministry of Foreign Affairs that manages the foreign affairs of the country. Attestation by this ministry, which is also known as MOFA attestation, is a mandatory step in the attestation of documents in these countries.
